

July 17, 2017

President Donald J. Trump
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue NW
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mr. President:

The 1,605 undersigned agricultural lenders and agribusinesses write out of concern for the ongoing financial hardships facing America's cotton farmers. Passage of the current farm bill in 2014 brought dramatic changes to cotton producers' safety net. Unfortunately, since 2013 when the bill was being developed, cotton prices have not been at a profitable level. According to data from the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), cotton market returns have fallen short of the total costs of production (variable and fixed, not including a return to management and family living expenses). When accounting for the minimal Federal farm policy support provided under the current legislation, the last three years have seen total costs significantly exceed total returns. These sustained losses in the current period are unlike any in recent history for U.S. cotton.

Due to above-average yields in some states, normal crop rotations, and recent strength in cotton prices, current USDA projections call for an increase in 2017 cotton acres. However, while cotton returns have improved relative to some other crops, cotton still finds itself at an overall disadvantage relative to the major crops covered by the farm program safety net. In addition, gains in cotton fiber revenue have been partially offset by a decline in cottonseed prices. USDA data indicate that on average, cotton market returns are generally sufficient to cover variable (or operating) costs but fall well short of total costs. Unfortunately, the recent economic pressures will intensify as projections by the Food and Agricultural Policy Research Institute for 2017 and 2018 are for lower cotton market revenue relative to the 2016 crop.

The projections of continued economic losses cause serious concern among the lending and agribusiness community that rely so heavily on a vibrant farm economy. Equally concerning is that losses in cotton area translate into pressure on associated businesses, infrastructure and rural economies who are also our customers. Prolonged production declines of this scale will result in severe strain on the entire cotton infrastructure, which continues to be the backbone of many small, rural communities. Researchers at Texas A&M University have affirmed the multiplier effects on rural economies when cotton production declines. A thriving cotton economy is critical to the success of many local economies.

To avoid an even greater debt load or a further erosion of equity, cotton producers need economic assistance to weather the current financial challenges. It is imperative that actions be taken that can have a stabilizing effect on the U.S. cotton industry. We strongly recommend your Administration use its discretionary authority to assist in this situation and specifically authorize assistance similar to the recent Cotton Ginning Cost Share program. This assistance would help bring much needed stability and support to producers, and in these times of low prices, allow them to have the balance sheets necessary to procure production financing as we prepare for the 2018 Farm Bill debate.

Thank you for your consideration of our views.

Sincerely,
